

Tube Feeding Modules Reflection

I specifically included these modules to illustrate how learning from these modules, would impact my actual experiences in in person clinical tube feedings. I have had some experience with hasty air tubes in the military, but these modules taught me the basic concepts. I have to say, that learning from healthcare professionals in my SEL, was vastly different than the military experiences. I think the biggest challenge for me will be able to take this virtual information and put it into practice. By learning from these modules, I have learned that tube feedings are an essential practice to learn but also to do, and while I will not be pursuing the clinical route, it gave me information that I have already used in practice and will be able to reference in my future career. All in all, this was very informative and my first complete module or assignment that helped me understand how crucial it can be to patients.
